Creative rumble on the Matterhorn mountain

The innovative brains at CERVO Mountain Boutique Resort have once again been bold in coming up with unconventional ideas. As part of the 'one week in the mountains' project they have spontaneously declared the whole resort a playground for creative minds. The band 'The Yalta Club' will kick things off. The express goal of the imaginative ensemble is to produce a full album in just one week in the Valais mountains.

Impressive nature can help create impressive things. It goes without saying that the area around the Matterhorn mountain is not just for skiing and hiking but also for art, music and poetry.

CERVO masterfully combines creativity and hospitality with its 'one week in the mountains' project. Various artists from all over the world are offered the opportunity to use the multi-award-winning Mountain Boutique Resort as a workshop, studio and source of inspiration.

The band 'The Yalta Club' from Berlin and Paris will kick things off. Their goal is to produce a full album in seven days. 'The Yalta Club Sessions at CERVO' will be released as 100 limited edition vinyl records early next year. It will be exciting to see what refreshing ideas come to the unconventional musicians during their stay in the mountains.
